

CALLED ON THE PRESIDENT

EVANGELISTS PAY RESPECTS TO DOLE.

Chief Executive Exhorts the Preachers to United Work in Uplifting All Peoples—The Ex-Queen.

The Hawaiian Evangelical Association called on President Dole at the Executive building this morning in a body. About 120 delegates were present. They were received in the big hall of the House of Representatives. Present with the President were Minister Mott-Smith and Minister Young.

During the formal part of the proceedings President Dole addressed the delegation, thanking the members for the visit. He went on to remind them of the importance of their work and called attention to the new era just opening and the duties of the hour. He urged that in their Christian duties they work together for the uplifting of the whole people. Let there be no color line and no prejudices. Let all Hawaii be benefited by the noble efforts of the Association.

The President did not directly refer to the political situation but in a general way called attention to the necessity of working for the greatest good for everybody. He urged those present to work in their respective fields for the solidifying of moral and educational endeavors.

Yesterday afternoon the association called on Ex-Queen Liliuokalani at Washington Place and were most cordially received. The trend of Her Majesty's remarks was singularly like that of President Dole. She urged strongly that in all good work there should be no division and by all means draw no color lines anywhere. The Queen did not refer to politics in any way.

The Association will tonight attend the commencement at Kamehameha school.

At the meeting this morning reports for the year were read. It was discovered in the treasurer's report that the maligned missionaries had contributed nearly $30,000 for the work of the Association and education of young Hawaiians while Kaui's contingent had not given one cent.

COUNCIL OF STATE MEETS

THE APPROPRIATION BILLS ARE AMENDED.

Action Recommended by President McKinley—Bills are Now in Full Force and Effect.

The Council of State was summoned in special session this morning to consider a letter from the central government in regard to the bills recently passed by that body and referred to Washington. The meeting was held in the Executive chamber.

The letter was from Secretary Hay. It stated that President McKinley objected to the clause in bills two, three and four, subjecting them to his approval, as being entirely unnecessary. The President stated that he had already approved the authority of the Council of State to make appropriations and that no further approval was necessary. He recommended that the Council amend the bills accordingly and that they should go into effect. The bills were referred back for this action.

The Council first amended the rules under which it had acted so as to carry out the President's ideas. Then the clause in each bill making it necessary for the approval of the President was stricken out. The bills were then further amended to make them go into effect as of April 30, 1906.

President Dole is of the opinion that this thoroughly disposes of the whole matter and that what law there may be on the subject has been thoroughly complied with.

THE NATIVE CONVENTION.

The native convention will keep up until Saturday night, when it will close with a big mass meeting. About a half dozen speeches will be made at that time.

POLES TO MAUI.

Manager Cross of the wireless telegraph company made arrangements this morning with the Western Steamship Company to transport the poles to Molokai, Maui and Hawaii. Those for the first two islands will likely get away in the next twenty-four hours. They are in three sections, and will be put up like a steamship's mast.

MINSTRELS LEAVING.

The Hogan minstrels leave town tonight on the Canadian liner Warimoo, a steamship of the same line as the one that refused to take them, and which they are suing for heavy damages on account thereof. The suits have not all been settled, but Hogan says that they will all be fought. For several days past negro artists have been busy making depositions for the cases that are to come up in the future. The scenery and baggage of the minstrels were taken to the wharf last night.

SOME CANDIDATES.

Quite a few names are mentioned as candidates of the Democrats to go to Kansas City. Of the number John D. Holt and W. H. Cornwell are probably certain to go. Mr. McClanahan, Colonel Macfarlane, John E. Bush and several others are prominently mentioned. Prince David Kawanakakoa, who had been spoken of, has declined, on account of business, to accept a nomination.

ADMISSION BADGES.

A. M. Hells is getting out several designs of badges for Admission Day. He has several that are quite unique.

ABOUT LABOR.

The planters adjourned their meeting without taking any action in regard to labor. Mr. Atherton stated this morning that the Honolulu representatives would follow up the matter and endeavor to discover some satisfactory channel out of the impending difficulty. The idea of importing labor from Porto Rico still seems to have the ascendancy in the minds of many interested.

PLANTER'S ESTATE.

Mathilde Jurgensen this morning filed in the Circuit court a petition for the probate of the will of her late husband, Jacob Jurgensen, formerly a coffee planter on Hawaii. The estate consists of realty worth $2,700, and personal property valued at $10,074.20. It is requested that the Hawaiian Trust and Investment Company be appointed administrator. The heirs are the petitioner and four children.

HACKMAN LUCAS.

J. A. Lucas, the local hackman, is again in business. He is driving hack 17, and can be found by ringing up telephone 319.

VAGRANT VERSES.

A neat little booklet of poems by H. M. Ayres; just published, and for sale at the Golden Rule Bazaar, 315 Fort street. Price, 50 cents.

TURK AND LEWIS IN COURT

GIVEN THE BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT.

And Are Discharged—The Court's Remarks Amount to a Moral Verdict of Guilt—A Reluctant Witness.

Turk & Lewis were tried in the District court this morning for assault and battery on Thomas Butler, alleged to have been committed in the Anchor saloon a week ago Monday night. Judge Wilcox, after hearing the evidence, said that there was an evident disinclination on the part of some of the witnesses to tell exactly what did occur. He didn't wonder that any man who had in him any of the spirit of fair play should hate to tell about such a disgraceful affair. But the defendants were entitled to the benefit of the doubt and he was obliged to discharge them. John Butler, the first witness called, was more than half seasick, and his evidence was not very clear. He had been knocked down three times and given a black eye.

Sailor Brannan, the next witness, had a very evident desire not to hurt the sensitive feelings of Lewis & Turk. He said he had had a little "slapping match" with Butler, "not to hurt." With a good deal of effort the marshal extracted an admission that when things got warm the slaps changed to punches, though Brannan was absolutely certain that it was with a slap with his open palm and not with his fist that he had blacked Butler's eye. "I only struck him once with my fist and then I missed," said the sailor. He admitted that Brannan was down once or twice.

Lewis and Turk were both there, the witness stated, and he also said they would not have been any fight at all if they had not been there. "I knew they wanted me to give him a punch," said Brannan, "because Lewis said 'Why don't you give him a punch in the stomach and lay him out?'" Later the witness said that it was Turk who offered this amiable suggestion.

Officer Lambert testified that Lewis and Turk cleared the floor of the saloon to make room for Brannan and Butler to fight, and that once when Butler was knocked down Lewis went, picked him up and stood him in front of Brannan to be knocked down again. At the end of the fight Butler, who was drunk all the time, while Brannan was sober, was so badly used up that he could not fight any more. However, he was able to get to the bar for a drink in a few moments.

Thomas Carpenter, who was in the place during the fight was not sure of anything but that it was a very mild affair.

Bob Carlisle, the bartender, said that it was nothing but playful "scrapping," but as both men were under the influence of liquor, he feared it might get rough, and so had stopped it after Butler had been knocked down twice. Lewis, a sailor from the Mauna Ala, confirmed Carlisle's opinion and account of the matter.

The next witness, James Reilly, had seen the fight and thought that Butler was getting the worst of it. He saw Lewis make a dash at Butler and get hold of him by the back of the neck. Lewis shook the witness and told him the affair was none of his business. Reilly was a bit shaky as to just why he wanted to hold Lewis back at all, though he admitted that his idea was to protect Butler.

Oscar Lewis proved rather the most picturesque witness in the case.

"Me and Mr. Turk was in there," he said, "with a couple of others, Mr. Jackson and another sailor lad. We was standing up at the bar drinking, when in comes Butler. He talked some about wanting to go two rounds with Brannan, but to tell you the truth under oath, Marshal, I couldn't just say what he did say, for I didn't pay any attention to it. Butler and Brannan went at it, boxing with the open hand. Butler went down the open hand, and then they both went down together. Then they got up and went at it again, and Brannan knocked Butler down. I didn't want to see any more of it and I comes around and picks Butler up and Bob takes hold of Brannan and starts to fight. That's all I had to do with it, in fact, I don't know all that did happen, because I wasn't paying any attention."

"Then you didn't urge Brannan to do Butler up," asked Marshal Brown.

"No; why that I was a poor imbecile that I've given two him for many a time for him to get something to eat."

"You didn't have it in for him because he deserted after you had shipped him, and swim ashore from the Babcock?"

"Why, I've taken him ashore, Marshal, several times after I've shipped him because he's an imbecile, and masters don't care much for him. He goes crazy in the fo'kale. He didn't swim ashore from the Babcock; he was sent ashore in a boat, three or four days before the Babcock sailed."

"You didn't have it in for him because he came down to you at a saloon a little while before this and asked you for a quarter?"

"Why, Marshal, that was before supper time, about four or half-past, and this happened after seven. He's always bothering me. If he seems in conversation anywhere he comes right up and chips in. He'll tell you himself, if he'd speak the truth, that I've helped him many a time."

"You consider this matter at the Anchor saloon a very trivial matter, don't you? There wasn't any roughness, although Butler was knocked down twice and had his eye blacked?"

"Butler's face was puffed up with liquor, and a slap of the hand would show black as easy as a blow with the fist. But as for roughness, no; there wasn't anything of that caliber. Why, when Bob stopped the fight, Butler and Brannan were both drunk."

CURIO COMES FROM KONA

AN OLD NATIVE RELIC DUG FROM THE SOIL.

Purser Davis of the Upolu, Offers the Bishop Museum a Lava Stone and a Bowl.

Purser Jim Davis of the steamer Upolu, brought from Kona this trip an interesting curio dug out of the soil at Haikiki, Kona. It is a stone awa bowl, with an idol's image carved on the side. The bowl is said by the natives of Kona to be about 150 years old, and its appearance bears out the statement. Its image is much worn, the nose and eyes having lost much of their outline. A stone awa bowl is a rare thing, nearly all that have been found being of wood.

Davis found his awa bowl near where an old native hut once stood. All that remains of the hut are stones showing where the foundation was. In digging for coffee plants and sprouting trees, the bowl was found, about five feet below the surface. It is thought that the bowl was interred with the body of some native whose property it was. It is cut out of lava stone, and weighs about forty pounds.

The awa bowls, as everyone but malihinis knows, were used to pound a root in, for the making of the native drink, awa. It is thought that further search at the scene of the find might result in finding the pounder and possibly other trophies buried with the owner. But Davis did not keep up the search. He will offer the bowl to the Bishop museum. There is no such thing as a stone awa bowl in its collection, and Kamaeinas say that a stone one is a rare curiosity.

ESTATE MATTERS.

Mrs. Lizzie Kahookoo has petitioned the court to appoint the Hawaiian Trust and Investment Company guardian of the property of her minor children.

Henry Smith has been appointed guardian of the minor children of Kapaka Kaukane under $4,000 bonds. Judge Stanley has approved the accounts of J. A. Magoun, guardian of the Elsieid minors.

DEMOCRATS ORGANIZING.

Dr. John S. McGrew has received a letter from C. A. Galbraith of Hilo, announcing that the Democrats there are organizing and will send a full delegation to the Democratic Territorial convention.

Work has also been received from Kauai that the Democrats of the Garden Isle are organizing and will in all probability be fully represented in the convention.

The Democratic precinct primaries on the island of Oahu will be held this afternoon in the several precincts from 5 to 7 o'clock.

MONEY FOR EXPENSES.

The Finance Committee for Territorial Day celebration is receiving liberal subscriptions to the expense fund. Those desiring to contribute may do so through C. M. Cooke, or Bank of Hawaii; James Gordon Spencer of Pacific Hardware Company; W. F. Allen and W. C. Achi.

A LOST CHILD.

Wanders Far From Home; Restored by the Police.

A little three year old tot that had wandered more than a mile away from home, was found and restored to its distracted parents yesterday evening.

The child is Victor Connolly, living with his parents, Lillia and John, not far from King. About 7 o'clock last evening Officer Hanrahan with another officer, was in the neighborhood of Wyllie street and Nuuanu stream. In the house of a Hawaiian family they found the little child which had wandered far from home. The child had been taken care of by the family, but was in high good humor. He readily consented, however, to go with the officers when they promised to find his mamma, and in fact, the suggestion seemed to recall for the first time to the child's mind a realization of the fact that he was away from home and lost. He knew his name, but did not know where he lived. To the name of every street suggested he said he lived on it. The number seven seemed to be the only number fixed on the child's mind, for he gave that number in response to every question which called for a number. The officers took him to several places where it seemed likely from his answers he might live. Then the police station was called up by telephone to see if the loss of any children had been reported there. The parent of the child had reported the loss of their child there, and Officer Hanrahan had no difficulty then in restoring the child.

The child was first missed from home about 5 o'clock. There was a search in the neighborhood before the police were notified. How the child had wandered so far away from home in so short a time is not yet known. The child himself can give no intelligible account.

THEY ARE INDEPENDENTS

NATIVE HAWAIIANS DRAW THE LINE.

Unanimous Vote Not to Affiliate With Either Great Party—Platform of George Markham.

The native Hawaiians have perfected the formation of an independent party in Hawaiian politics, and will try to go it alone.

This conclusion has been unanimously reached by the delegates now holding forth in the drill shed. They have thrown aside both the Republican and Democratic platforms for one of their own to be adopted later in the deliberations of their council. They figure that by standing together they can control both houses of the Legislature and send their man to Congress.

In other words they have drawn a line—royalist Hawaiians versus anybody else.

When the session of the Independent convention opened this morning several new delegates from the other islands were reported. A committee on credentials was appointed. One man, Akina, had no credentials but as he was regularly chosen the convention by vote, seated him. The remainder of the session to noon was devoted to details.

George Markham presented to the convention a platform. It is very short and covers little ground but will probably answer its purposes. The first section provides that Government laborers, whether on contract or otherwise, shall work only eight hours a day. Mr. Markham explains that this is to protect the workman against over hours as is frequently the case now.

The second section of the document prescribes that all labor, contract or otherwise, be citizens of the United States. This is leveled directly at Asiatics and Europeans, and is intended to protect Hawaiians and mainlanders.

The third section expresses the determination of the party to encourage in every possible way the introduction of labor from the mainland of the United States. This is in line with the provisions of the second section.

The fourth section pledges the party to a policy against trusts of every description in these islands.

And that is all.

James K. Kaula, vice chairman, offered another platform as an amendment. It is very long and covered many points, those made by Markham being included, however. The most important additional point was a pledge that the party would contend for equal rights to all at all times, irrespective of race or color.

This amended platform was adopted.

Yesterday afternoon the members of the convention called on the ex-Queen who received them kindly and addressed them for about ten minutes. She spoke slowly and deliberately, saying in part:

"It is useless for us to abstain from taking our future stand. Our future prosperity depends upon it. As soon as the United States flag was hoisted over these islands, and our Hawaiian flag was lowered by the authority of the American government, it meant that it had come to stay. It is my wish for your future welfare to stand shoulder to shoulder and seek every means that will conduce to the benefit of the whole nation. When the flag went down, it went down for good. We must now do our duty as American citizens."

The resolution adopted by the convention declaring for an independent party was as follows: "That the Hawaiians should stand as an independent or home rule party." There was not a vote against this.

HOW TO CURE A SPRAIN.

Last fall I sprained my left hip while handling some heavy boxes. The doctor I called on at first said it was a slight strain, and would soon be well, but it grew worse, and the doctor then said I had rheumatism. It continued to grow worse and I could hardly get around to work. I went to a drug store and the druggist recommended me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I tried it and one-half of a 50-cent bottle cured me entirely. I now recommend it to all my friends.—F. A. Babcock, Erie, Pa. It is for sale by all dealers and druggists. ## NO PROGRESS AT SYDNEY

PLAQUE SITUATION AS BAD AS EVER.

Work of Cleansing the City Not Yet Completed—Conditions Like Those Found in Honolulu.

The steamship Warimoo, which arrived last night from the Colonies, reports the plague situation to be about the same in Sydney. The efforts of the authorities to stamp out the epidemic have not met with success so far, three cases a day being still the average. There were about a hundred and ten patients in the plague hospital when the steamer left. Capt. Phillips says that the disease arouses little fear among the population, and is not thought much of. "The death rate is very small," said the Warimoo's captain, "and the people of Sydney are not at all frightened at the situation." The disease has spread to Melbourne, where there were four cases in one family on May 21. A good deal of uneasiness is felt because the children have been attending the State school.

At Sydney the work of cleansing the city is not even yet completed. New areas are being successively put under quarantine and subjected to the attentions of inspectors. The district that was being attended to on the Warimoo's sailing date is spoken of as about the worst that has yet been opened up in the city. The resemblance to Honolulu conditions before the plague is seen in the descriptions of the inspectors of the dilapidated buildings they found, many of them with floors below the street level.

As the Warimoo had been fifteen days at sea since she left Sydney, she is not considered dangerous to Honolulu. Dr. Wood kept her outside the harbor when she arrived at 9:30 last night, however, giving permission for her to come in this morning. She is at the Pacific Mail wharf, and is not in quarantine. The Warimoo leaves at 6 o'clock this evening for Victoria.

PASTORS IN SESSION.

Addressees Upon the Mission Fields of Honolulu.

The Hawaiian Association of churches and ministers at Kapaeha church spent the greater part of this morning's session in listening to addresses from the various mission fields of Honolulu.

Rev. Hiram Bingham, D. D., spoke of the work carried on among the Gilbert Islanders, quite a number of whom are in the city. They were under the heavy hand of the plague. One of their number died and their homes were burned. They are making the best of their present condition. They attend Kapaeha Sabbath school and church.

Rev. A. V. Soares and Rev. Mr. Silva spoke in behalf of the Portuguese work both in Honolulu and on Maui. Mr. Silva is just entering upon a new work in Maui.

Rev. Mr. Russell explained the condition of Mills Institute and spoke of the school which had been driven out of its home by the plague—of the pleasant days spent by the Chinese boys at Moanalua during the epidemic, and thus reported the Chinese work for Mr. Damon.

Rev. J. M. Lewis reported the native work on Maui and Rev. Okamura had Mr. Emerson state the condition of the Japanese field. The rest of the forenoon was taken up by a report from W. W. Hall, treasurer of the Hawaiian Board.

THE PROVIDENT'S SUCCESS.

Among the statements that have been issued by the leading life insurance companies, the exhibit made by the Provident Savings Life is one of the most interesting. The company announced that during the year 1905 it issued policies aggregating $17,000,000, which is an increase of $17,000,000 over the amount during 1904. I. R. Burns is the resident manager, office in Old Government building, next to postoffice.
